TYPE: News

DATE OF BROADCAST: September 11, 2004

DESCRIPTION: The house is winning a little less frequently across Nevada, that's according to the latest numbers on casino winnings. In July, casinos across Nevada took more than 812-million dollars from gamblers. It is a lot of money but nearly two percent less than what casinos took in during July of 2003. The state gaming control board says the drop was mainly caused by some lucky black jack players, who were able to hit big.
